Contemporary Fiber: Botanicals

May 17 – September 28, 2025

Inspired by the natural world, Contemporary Fiber: Botanicals features artworks that have literal or abstract botanical themes. The artworks are made with a wide range of fiber techniques, including sewing, weaving, embroidery, felting, twining, applique, quilting and knitting. Some use unconventional fiber materials like reed grasses, moss, lichen and recycled livestock feed bags. This international juried exhibition is on view in the Gardens' Freyer – Newman Center May 17 – September 28, 2025 and is included with Gardens' admission.

Contemporary Fiber is created in partnership with Fiber Art Now magazine who selected and published 40 artworks in their magazine, from which Denver Botanic Gardens selected artworks for the exhibition. Nearly all 23 featured artists are based in the United States, including three from Colorado: Joel Allen, Deborah Davis and Karen Eberle-Smith. One artist is based in Canada and one in the United Kingdom.
